Research Interests

Applied Macroeconomics, Time Series Econometrics , Expectations, Learning Models.

My research particularly lies in the field of Applied Macroeconometrics (e.g. estimation of unobserved components, shock identification techniques). Currently, I work on (i) the estimation and study of the effects of expectations on house price fluctuations (confronting the fundamental and expectational view), (ii) analyzing the effects of nontechnological news shocks on unemployment fluctuations. In my JMP, I disentangle the nature (permanent and transitory) and channels (global, domestic and energy) driving current highs in Euro Area inflation.
